

Many years ago in a Amazon forest dwelled a snake who biggest desire was to fly above the clouds. He would look at the birds of the sky and say, how I would love to fly like the birds of the sky.

One day a frog over heard the snake say "I want to fly" and as he heard him, he continue hopping along.

I want to fly.

As the months pass that desire didn't left the snake but grew stronger. He was determine to fly.

The snake one day climbed up a tree, grab some vines with leaves and tie them to himself then he threw himself off the tree in hope that he would fly.

but he went straight smack down to the ground.

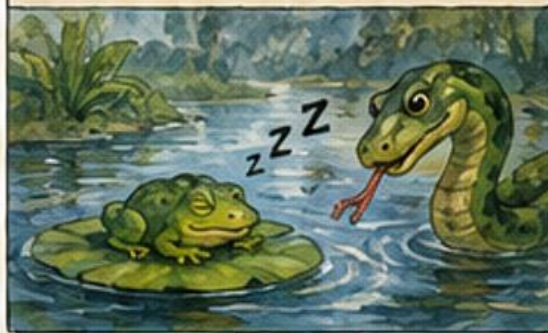

Hurt, ashamed that it didn't work, dizzy and in pain, he slithered away. While all the animals in the forest laughed at the snake.

As the frog looked at what happened he couldn't laugh with the other animals but admired the snake persistence in trying to achieve his dream. And he said to himself

Some months later the snake became very hungry and was out searching for food. And at the pond was Mr frog sleeping on a lily pad.

Before he could wake up he was swallowed whole by Mr snake.

As he opened his eyes all he could see was the darkness of night in the belly of the snake. And he yelled "where am I".

"In my belly" said Mr snake. At that he recognized the voice to be that of Mr snake.

"Let's make a deal, I know how you could fly, but you need to vomit me out."

At hearing this Mr snake vomited the frog out of his mouth.

Asd said "you have a deal but you double cross me and back you go."

Now the frog had to think fast and wisely because he knew more than ever the Snake was no friend, that one could admire his persistence in not giving up his goal to fly, but a enemy that if he would help him achieve his goal, would later on try to eat him or someone he loved.

So the frog told the snake "bite this piece of branch that fell off the tree and follow me."

So the snake followed the frog with the piece of branch in his mouth. The snake slithered, the frog hopped till they came to a large mountain. Then the frog said "we now have to climb."

So they climb the immense mountain till they reached close to the top where there was a nest of an eagle with eggs ready to be hatched.

"Put down the branch and swallow the eggs."

Put down the branch and swallow the eggs.

The snake replied "if I swallow the eggs how will that make me fly."

They are magical eggs and they will make you fly like an eagle.

As the snake started to swallow each egg, the frog heard the eagle approaching and hid in the branch.

The Eagle saw from the distance the snake swallowing her eggs and she grabbed the snake in such speed that could only be compared to a flash of light and flew with the snake holding him by her claws.

The snake looked down and saw himself flying over the clouds and was amazed that the eggs was magical indeed that it cause him to fly.

And as he was filled with joy that finally his dream came true the eagle let go.

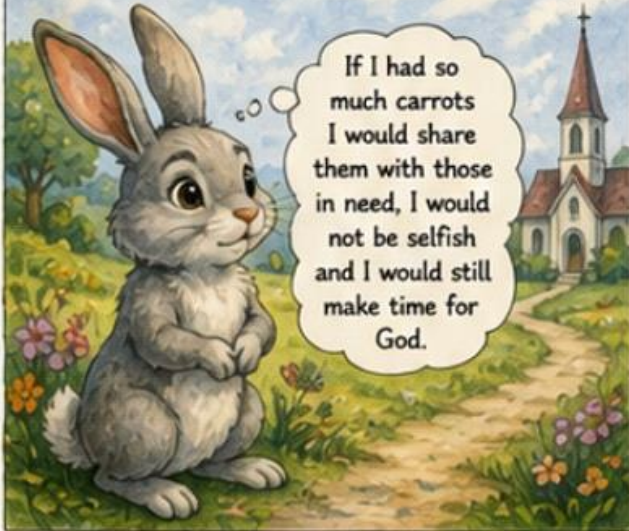

And the snake fell straight down to ground with a great smack to the floor. Dead at arrival.

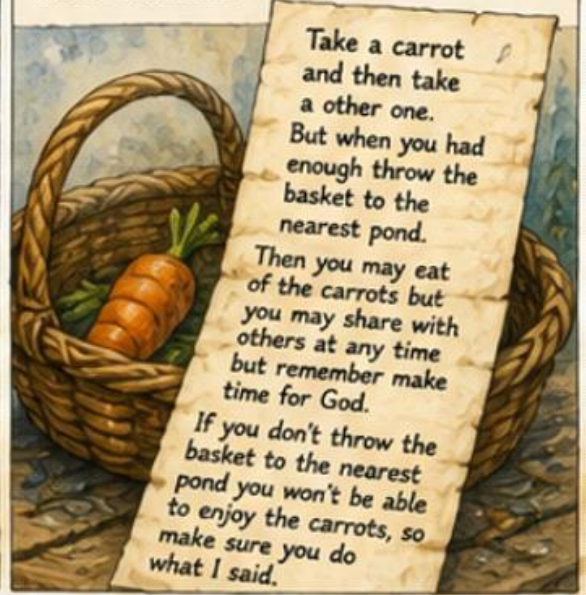

So the moral of the story is there are times where our dreams or desires might do us more harm than good. So it is good to be happy in the state that you're in than to have what you want and that cause you your doom.

The Rabbit Who Wanted to Be Rich

If I had so much carrots I would share them with those in need, I would not be selfish and I would still make time for God.

One day as she walked to the church, she saw a basket with a letter and a carrot inside that said—

Take a carrot and then take a other one. But when you had enough throw the basket to the nearest pond.

Then you may eat of the carrots but you may share with others at any time but remember make time for God.

If you don't throw the basket to the nearest pond you won't be able to enjoy the carrots, so make sure you do what I said.

As she took the carrot that was in the basket she saw that a other would appear.

So she decided that day to skip church and said later after I have enough carrots I will make time for God.

As she was busy at home taking carrots from the basket a knock of a poor homeless squirrel came at the door.

Where in response mis rabbit answered

As she shut the door and went back to pull more carrots she was stricken in her conscience that she did nothing she had promised she would do.

But the love for more carrots was stronger than the conscience that she had.

So that day pulling carrots from the basket she herself did not eat and sleep went away from her eyes. She was selfish and cruel.

She had already pulled out more than a million carrots but yet wanted more.

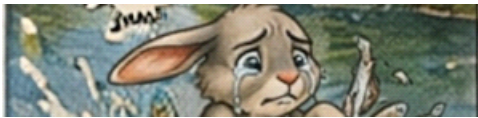

But again her conscience started to bother her this time stronger than before and she said

So going to the pond she threw the basket but part of her not wanting to let go she fell in the pond with the basket.

And then she was drowning.

Mr squirrel saw her from afar and ran and jumped in the water to save her and told her to—

But she said

I need the basket as well.

In response he said again

Let go of the basket for I can only save you.

At hearing this she let go.

And as she was on land safe and sound she felt relief that the selfishness and greed was no more.

So she invited Mr squirrel and many others to have a feast with all the carrots that she had, then they all went to church as she promised she would.

So the moral of the story is keep your promises, remember not to be selfish and make time for God when all your prayers are answered so it won't be a curse instead of a blessing.

The Ugliest Man One Can See

There was once a man who was so ugly that on the day he was born the doctor instead of slapping the baby, at first sight ran out the door.

And even though he came out the womb she was told, it won't be a sin to kill such a ugly child.

But yet to his mother he was the most beautiful baby she had ever saw and she would not dream of killing her little angel.

In school no one wanted to be around him, so he sat alone, played alone, ate lunch alone, and grew up pretty much alone.

but not without his mother's and Father's love. Who while they was alive showed much love.

But the day came as we all have too in one time pass away from one life here below to heaven above.

So the Father was the first to pass away, and he said before he passed away to his Son.

You will be a king, I don't know how, but I was promised you would.

Then his mother aswell had to say good bye. Before her death his mother said.

In time you will be given a beautiful wife and many beautiful children I saw, who will love you as you are, for I prayed to God it to be so.

He lived in a house in a forest away from society, hidden from the world, because people seem not understand why a mother and Father should keep such a ugly child.

Next to his house he kept a garden the most beautiful garden one could ever known.

And next to the garden was buried his mom and dad. And everyday he will go and take care of the garden, cry for his mom and dad.

Many miles away there was a palace of a king and queen who had a beautiful daughter which many men dreamed of marrying.

But none good enough for her. So the king and the Queen sent his daughter to another kingdom where they knew she will find her prince.

The last words the king and the queen said to their daughter was.

I spoke to King Frank, he has a handsome son and I arrange the marriage go and I'll see you within a year hopefully married with a prince that will be a king. Love you my daughter and I'll see you very soon.

As the princess left with her kidnappers that took her by another path and threw away Forest where they imagine no one but they would be. Not knowing the ugliest man there would be.

They tied her up, blindfolded her and let her scream. But no one heard her except from a distance the ugliest man one could ever be.

As the men talked about how much they will receive from the king and queen to see their lovely daughter once again.

The king will pay us a fortune!

The ugliest man was now approaching to save someone who you imagine needed to be saved and not expecting a reward for what he wants to do.

As he approached the area he yelled out let her go.

Let her go!

One of the knights who was a kidnapper was the first to draw his sword to the ugliest man and as he was going to attack he tripped on a rock and fell on his sword.

As this was happening she knew she was being saved and her heart pounded in love for the man who was willing to risk his life for a woman he did not know.

Another knight grab the sword and approach the ugliest man one can ever know as he was about to swing his heart stopped and would not beat no more because of fear.

The third knight said he is a warlock or some demon of some kind.

At this the ugliest man felt offended and grabbing a sword ran towards him, and the knight with other knights running and screaming ran away.

As they ran they left the Princess all alone.

But not alone, there was the ugliest man who untied her and let her go.

The blindfold was the last thing he removed. Before he removed the blindfold he told her.

And seeing him she saw the most handsome man one can ever see.

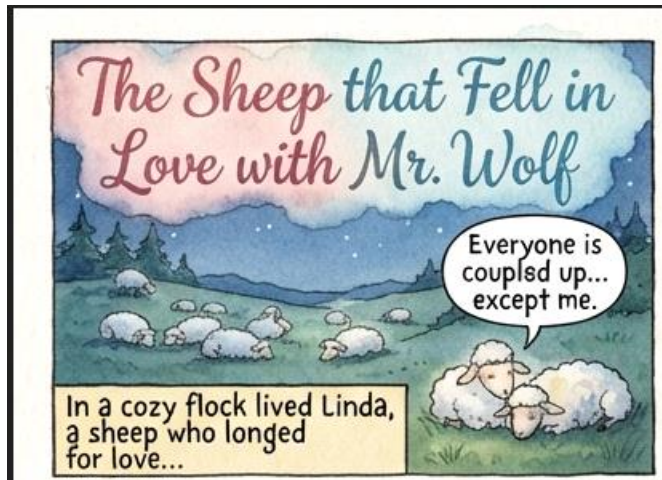

So as the mother and Father of the most handsome man one can ever know said he became a future king with a beautiful wife and beautiful children one can ever see.

So the moral of the story is don't judge a person by their appearance or what you see for that may be the most beautiful person you might see and know.

Deep in the woods, the Wolf Leader plotted an attack, unaware...

...Linda surprised the Wolf, gluing her collected wool onto him.

Shocked but cunning, the wolf realized this disguise could be his entry to the flock.

He convinced Linda to visit his "family" first, hiding his true intent.

But inside the cave, the pack saw only prey, wolf disguise

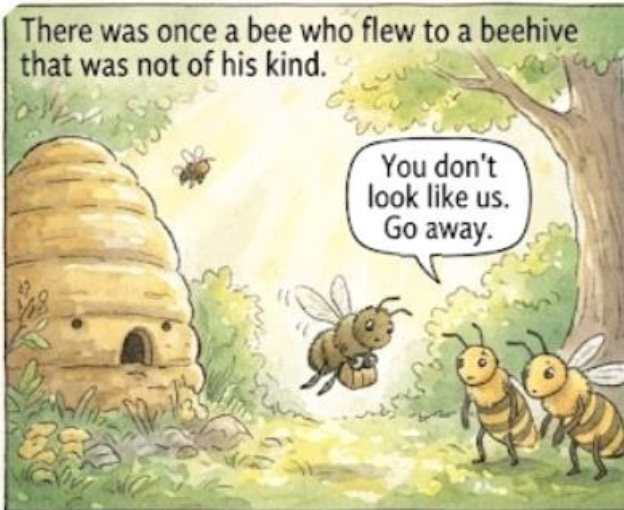

At dawn, Robert brought Linda the perfect husband he had prepared... but Linda was gone forever.
The Moral: Wait on God's timing, not the world's,

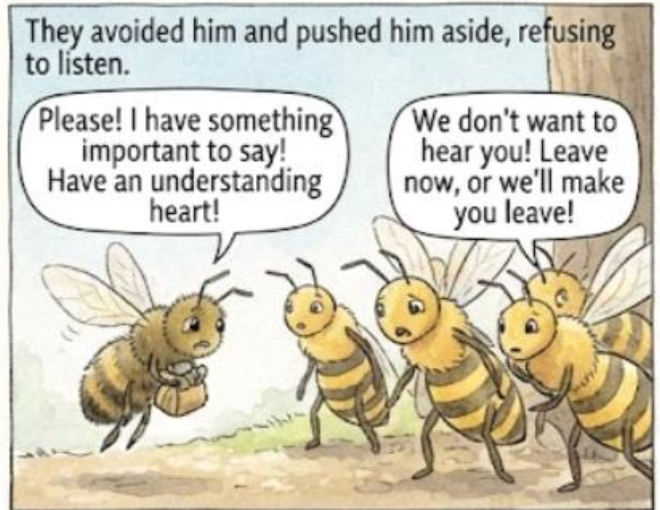

There was once a bee who flew to a beehive that was not of his kind.

You don't look like us. Go away.

They avoided him and pushed him aside, refusing to listen.

Please! I have something important to say! Have an understanding heart!

We don't want to hear you! Leave now, or we'll make you leave!

He warned them of the coming danger, but they only mocked him.

A bear destroyed my hive and said he's coming for yours tomorrow! Please listen!

A bear? After a year? You're not of our kind; we don't believe you!

Only one bee considered his words, but the group was firm in their disbelief.

Wait... what if he's right?

He's not of our kind. Don't listen to him! This hive is safe.

The thoughtful bee chose to believe and left with the stranger.

Within an hour, the bear destroyed the hive. Just like this bee, we are not of this world but must warn others to come to Jesus before it's too late.

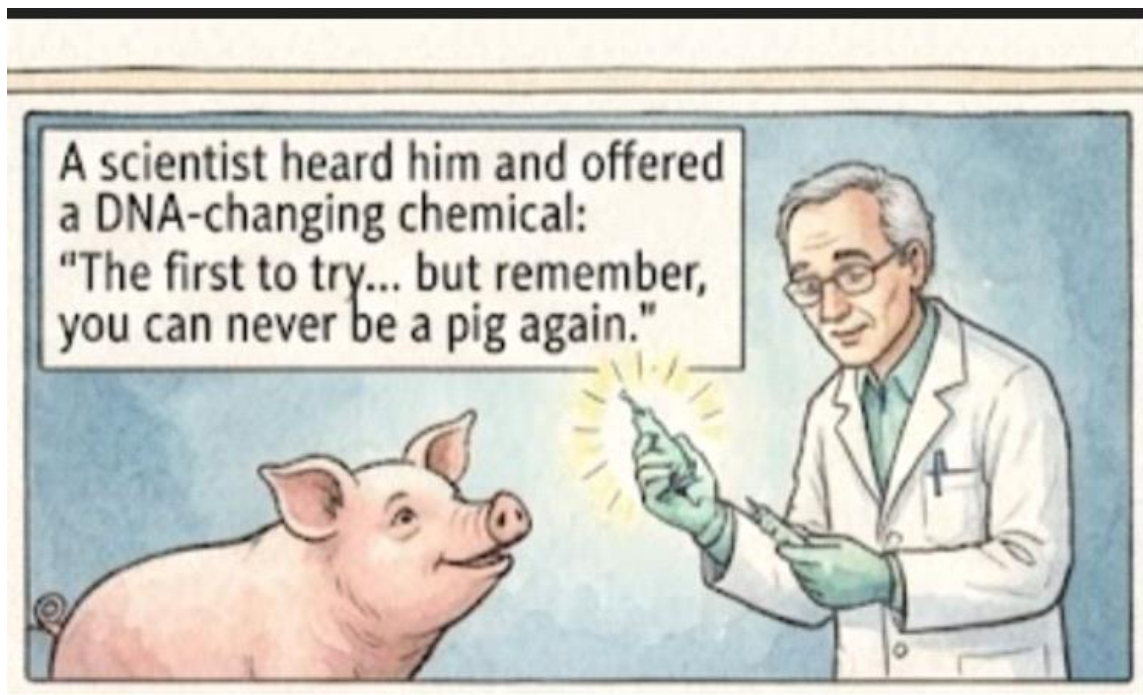

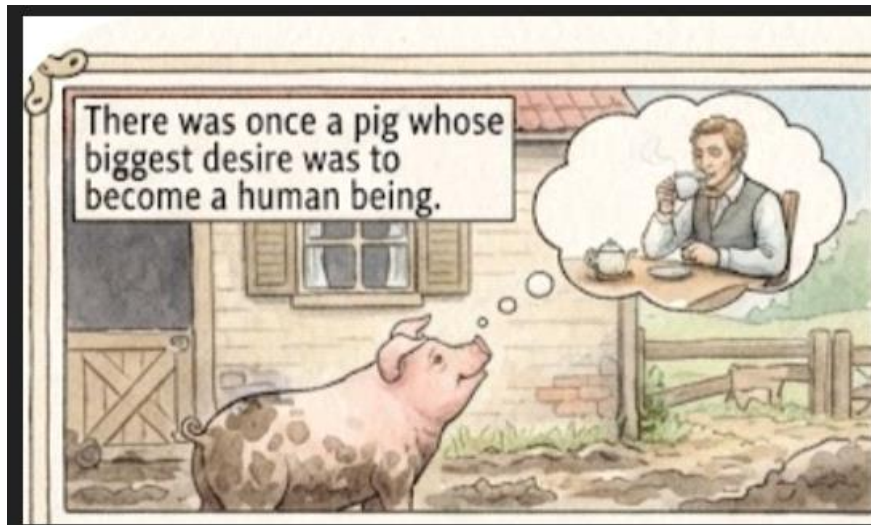

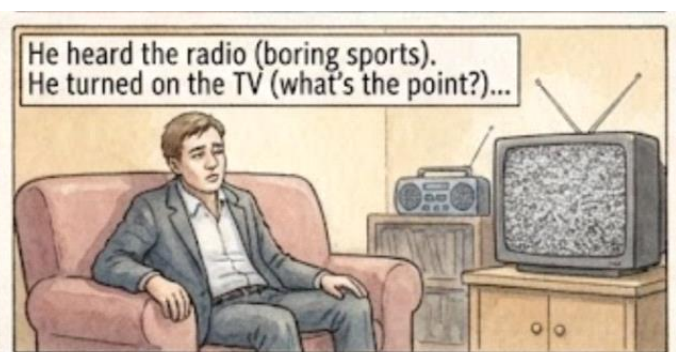

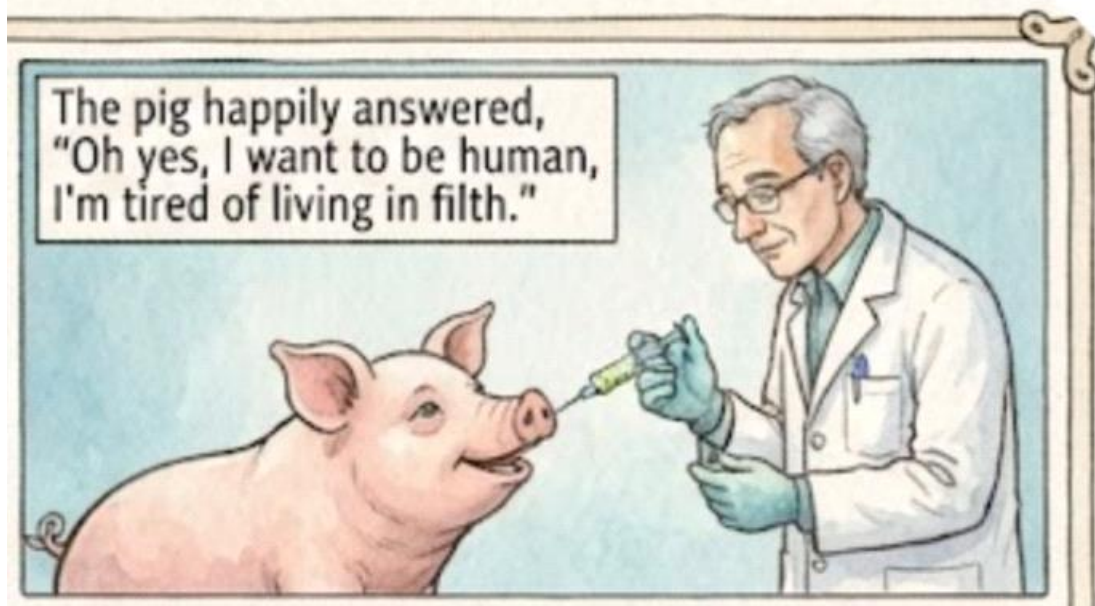

Even if they refuse to listen, it doesn't change the truth of what will take place.

~ THE PIG THAT ~ BECAME A MAN

A Fable of Transformation

And waking from his sleep, he found himself back in the barn...

It was a dream.
And praising God,
He was Thankful that God made him a pig.

The moral is: be content in whatever state you are in.

THE FOX & THE PIRANHAS

WELCOME TO FRIENDLY VILLAGE!

Rabbits! YUM!
They look like delicious food!

Andy the fox moved to a kind village.
He signed the "Law of Love" Oath (No Meat!)

THE SECRET POND.

Mayor, Andy looked hungry. The piranha pond must stay secret until he proves himself worthy.

If he does harm,
your house is closest, Mikey!

(PIRANHAS, hidden)

THE KIDNAPPING.

FRIENDSHIP & FORGIVENESS.

I see your pain,
Andy. Let's be friends.
I can help you find alternatives!

Thank you, Mikey.
You really are wise and kind.

THE SACRIFICE.

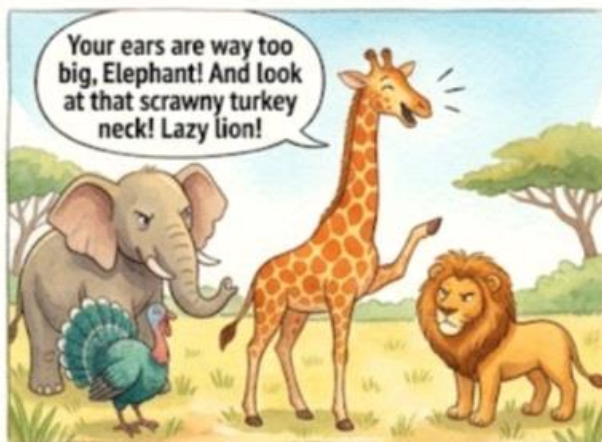

Morning.

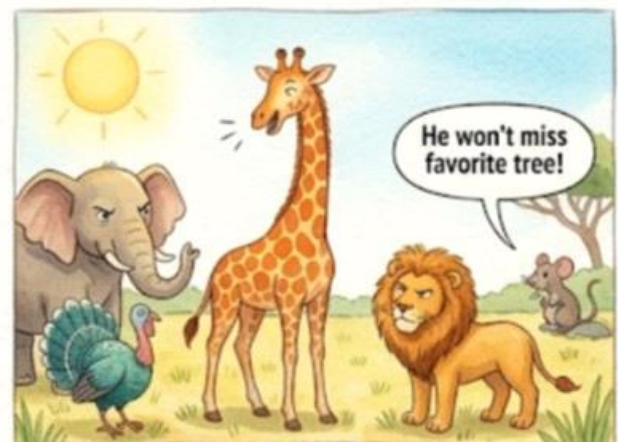

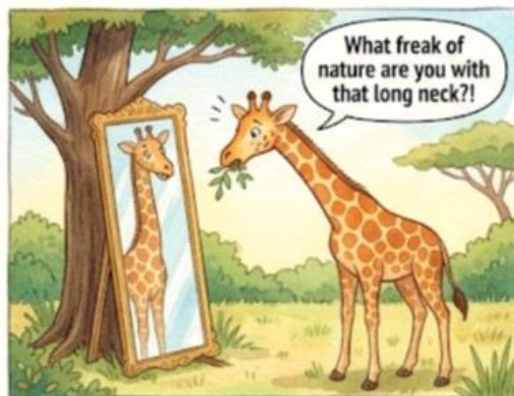

GERRY THE GIRAFFE MADE FUN OF EVERYONE. HE LAUGHED AT THE TURKEY'S SKINNY LEGS, THE LION'S LAZINESS, AND THE ELEPHANT'S BIG EARS.

GERRY THE GIRAFFE MADE FUN OF EVERYONE IN THE SAVANNA.

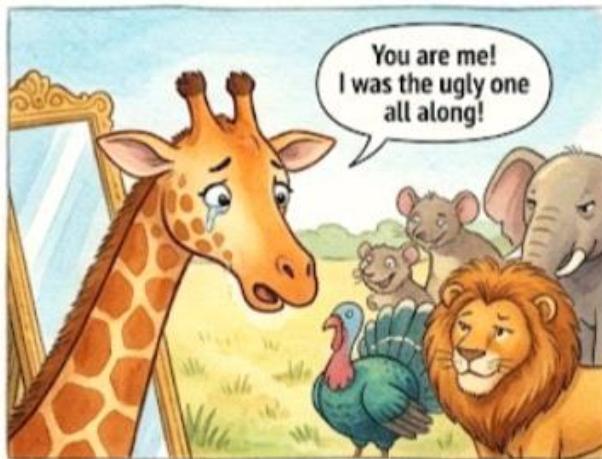

THE OTHER ANIMALS GREW TIRED OF HIS CRUELTY AND DECIDED TO ACT.

GERRY HAD NEVER SEEN HIS OWN REFLECTION BEFORE.

"WHAT FREAK OF NATURE ARE YOU?" GERRY LAUGHED.
BUT THEN HE REALIZED THE STRANGE ANIMAL WAS HIMSELF! HE WAS LOOKING AT A MIRROR!

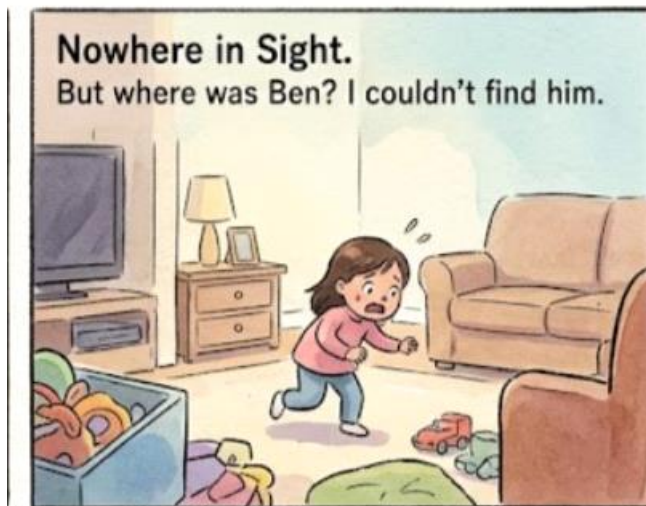

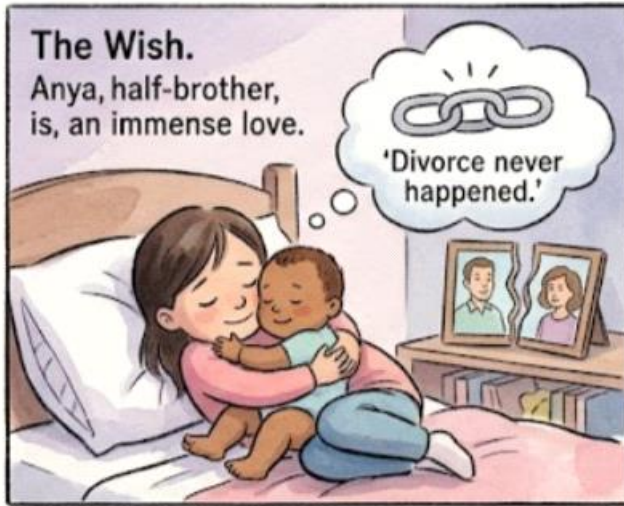

THE TRUTH WAS A PAINFUL LESSON.

HAVING LEARNED HIS LESSON, GERRY WAS THE FIRST TO OFFER KINDNESS TO EVERYONE WHO CAME TO THE WATERHOLE.

GERRY CRIED. "IT ISN'T FUN TO BE LAUGHED AT," HE LEARNED. GERRY ASKED THE FISH TO BE HIS FRIEND. THE FISH SAID, "YES! YOU ARE FRIENDLY!" FROM THAT DAY ON, GERRY FOUND GOOD THINGS TO SAY TO EVERYONE.

What Brother?

'Mom? Dad? Have you seen Ben? My baby brother?'

'What brother?' they, looking at each other. 'You are our only child.'

The Connection.

Then I realized... without the divorce, Mom would have never met my stepdad... Ben wouldn't exist.

Dad

Ben's Dad blood father.'

Grateful Anya.

Waking up, I was happy. God allowed the divorce... so Ben, the brother I love so dearly, could be born.

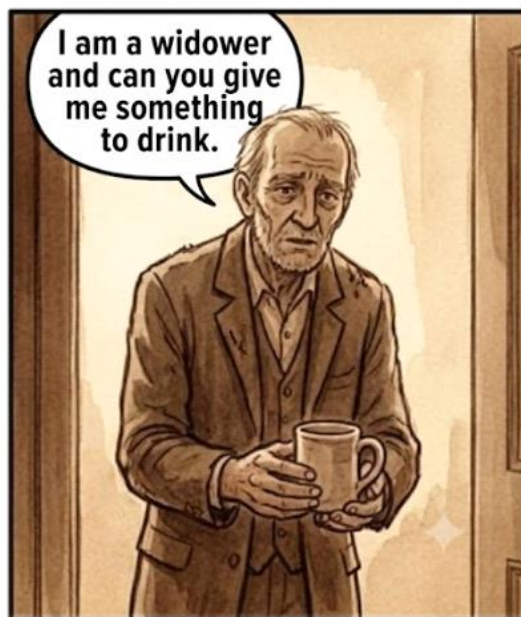

'Grateful for his life.'

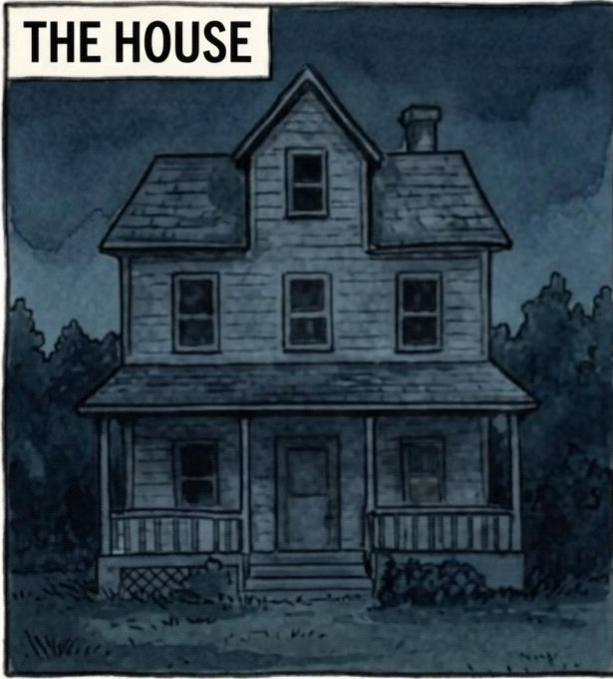

The Quiet Walk Home

Living all alone, I awoke to a squeak. Heart pounding

THE HOUSE

THE AWAKENING

Heart pounding like a tribe of drums.

I saw a tall shadow and shook in fear...
until I realized it was just me.

Then I heard a squeak! Trembling again... just a loose floorboard.

Reaching the first floor, I wondered why I was so scared.

And I found the culprit. A fat rat stuck! I gently nudged him in.

But he was stuck again! The other way. Just too fat to get out. His poor face is on the side of the wall, and I can hear him... sniff

He apologized. I felt bad and gave him cheese.
"Good night, my friend," I said.

I slept soundly, having made a "friend."
Unaware of his true nature.

They robbed me blind. The note read:
"Sorry, have a family to feed, friend."
The moral? Fear what you ought to fear.
